

Imagine Love

by Yoojin Bae

Love is the color of blazing sunrise that warms the land and others hearts.

It sounds like the purr of a mother cat as she gently washes her kittens.

It tastes like the sweet golden honey that sticks to people's faces when they've eaten a honey sandwich.

It is the sweet perfume of red roses that have been given with a fond heart.

It looks like the entwining of tails as two cats stroll in the moonlight.

It feels like a soft, fuzzy teddy bear that always awaits someone's hug.

Love is the color of graceful baby pink flamingos as they wade along with their partners in the shallows.

It is the cooing of doves as they rest on an olive branch that gently sways in the warm spring breeze.

It tastes like the hot chocolate on a freezing cloudy winter evening as the first flakes of snow dance down from the sky.

It smells like the blooming lilies and lavenders in the spring, when everything comes back to life.

It looks like the sugar cookies shaped like a heart with pink frosting that awaits partly hidden on one's desk.

It feels like a warm fur coat that one puts on in the chilly autumn wind that howls through the night.

Love is multicolored and brighter than anyone can imagine. One shade or sparkle more beautiful than the last.

The twinkle of bells ring out with the sound of a loving heart.

It is the taste of the sweetest chocolates that is even sweeter on Valentine's Day.

It carries the scent of sharp autumn night breeze that tugs at people's hair making them feel alive.

It looks like two dragonflies when they have finally met their match.

It feels like ones arms enveloping another to keep them warm and safe.

Love is when two become one.
