Agriculture in Florida

Agriculture is the second largest industry in Florida next to tourism.

Florida has a huge diversity of agricultural operations! Our unique climate with mild winters allows for year-round production of many incredible agricultural products. Throughout the state we have over 44,700 farms covering nearly 28% of the state’s land area. Despite being a relatively urban area, Seminole County has more than 320 farms!

Not only do these farms help feed our ever-growing population, but they offer unique ecosystem services that improve our quality of life. These farms can help with water quality and air quality, provide habitat for thousands of native plants and animals, offer outdoor recreation, and more.

Florida is first in the U.S. for production of Valencia oranges, fresh market tomatoes, watermelons, bell peppers, grapefruit, sugarcane and indoor foliage plants.

Florida is second in the production value of strawberries, sweet corn, and all other oranges.

How can you support your Florida farmers?

- Purchase directly from farms
- Participate in a CSA program
- Shop for in season produce
- Start a farm-to-school garden
- Check labels for locally grown products
- Partake in agritourism, from u-picks to corn mazes
- Grow your own in your yard or community garden
- Encourage youth to pursue careers in agriculture
